

The Noisy Locomotive

Not since the New Lost City Ramblers has an old-time band understood the wide, wide styles that inform the old songs. Their attention to old vocal styles and how they complement the instrumentation is particularly amazing. A must-have at your festival.

- Matt Large (president of Folk Music Canada, Montreal Folkfest)

The new wave of old-time

- Apt 613

...at the Ottawa Folk Fest, The Noisy Locomotive was able to command the audience with a grace only capable of the most confident musicians. Their commitment to the relaxed atmosphere of the kitchen parties of Canada's yesteryear is impressive

- FOLK it ALL

The boys play toe-tapping, oak-bar fermented music, and they do it very well

- Ottawa Showbox

They are masters of that fresh, summer, old-time sound

- Ear To The Ground Music

The Noisy Locomotive are old school and beyond that they have that classic southern relaxed attitude on stage...calm, precise and moreover a breath of fresh air, which is ironic considering how old the music is that they play

Bio

Bridging the gap between Montreal and Ottawa, Trevor Pool and Ben Nesrallah offer up a unique blend of original and traditional stringband music that recalls the true spirit of an old-time kitchen party. Fiddle, mandolin, banjo, guitar, and their sibling-like harmonies unite to bring you that down-home, authentic sound you've been hankering after.

In October, The Noisy Locomotive released a new duo album entitled "All Nature Soon Will Settle Down to Rest" — a captivating collection of original and traditional tunes. The album was recorded in one live session to quarter-inch tape at The Monolith in Kitchener, ON.

During their time spent together, The Noisy Locomotive has played at the Ottawa Folk Festival, Montreal Folk Festival, NXNE, Pop Montreal, and The Festival of Small Halls, to name a few. The Noisy Locomotive has also performed live-in-studio on CBC, CIUT, CHOM, CKCU, CHUO, CFFF and CKUT radio.
